Aan released on 7 March 1952, the film was a success and attained huge commercial success. The film was remade in Kannada as Simhaavu (2003) with Ravichandran and in Tamil as Sattam Oru Iruttarai with Ravichandran. Plot The film opens with Kishan (Dev Anand) taking shelter with a Mohini (Meena Kumari), who is travelling in a rickshaw. She falls asleep while she is being carried by Kishan. She wakes up and notices Kishan is sitting on a chariot. The chariot reaches an ancient city and they witness a chariot race in progress. The chariot race is won by Kishan. Mohini then goes into a palace along with Kishan. Kishan introduces himself as Govindram (S. B. Khan) and Mohini as his daughter. He takes Mohini to his palace and Mohini enters it. Kishan and Mohini fall in love with each other. Govindram also loves Mohini, he becomes jealous of Kishan's closeness to her. Kishan realises Mohini is a princess in disguise and decides to marry her and elope. Mohini's father catches Kishan and brings him back to his palace. Mohini promises to marry Kishan. Govindram wants to get Mohini married to someone else and creates trouble in their marriage. Govindram's wife, Rani (N. Prasad), leaves him and becomes a nun in a convent. Rani dies soon after. Rani's son, Raja (Alam), becomes a priest in the same convent. Rani's servant Kundan (Bhanwar) helps the prince escape from the palace by delivering him to a merchant, who gets him to a distant country. Kishan and Mohini elope and they live happily. Kishan gets a message from Govindram that he wants Kishan and Mohini to marry. Kishan is scared and asks Mohini to marry someone else. Mohini then decides to find out Govindram's intentions and goes to the palace.
